How would you hunt down and kill the indominus rex? What guns would you use?

Kill it? Why would I kill a creature such as this, something with an intelligence that rivals man? I would want to capture it, to break it's spirit, to dominate the indomitable. THAT is the true challenge.

To this end, I would make use of a powerful sedative. Fentanyl gas like the Russians used to knock out everyone in that theater hostage crisis would be preferred, but darts like in the second movie would probably do the trick. Once we have her down, I'd lock her in one of those cages they used to transport the T-Rex in Jurassic Park 2. She will never feel the earth beneath her feet again.

Now her training begins. Her teeth and claws will be surgically removed, and she'll be fed intravenously from this day forward. This is the first blow to her pride. All manner of game animals will be paraded in front of her cage, driving her into a frenzy, but she'll be unable to lay a finger on them. Eventually, the animals will begin to stop fearing her. She will growl, she will rumble, but her "food" won't bat an eye. This is the second blow to her pride. One day she will wake to find her tail has been removed, and an opening created at the rear of her cage. I will have ended John Hammond's practice of breeding no male dinosaurs, and they will be free to use her as a giant stationary fucktoy. Not just other Rex's, either; all manner of dinosaurs will be fed massive quantities of viagra and given a tummy. Brontosaurus, triceratops, stegosaurus, even parasauropods (the one with the pompadour! Elvis!). Eventually she'll stop resisting, and that's when we'll know she's ready. The third and final blow has been struck.

A new display will open, starring our girl I-Rex. All the prior activities will continue, but now at scheduled show times for the masses. There will be one addition; the children will be encouraged to throw rocks at her while she's being humiliated. Ideally we wouldn't even have to restrain her at this point, but that's up in the air. Eventually even the children will tire of tormenting the "world's fiercest dinosaur", and on that day she will be euthanized. Her body will be butchered, her meat ground down, and she'll be sold as Dinoburgers in a quiet corner-store in the main visitor's area for $5.00 each.

And that's how I would kill the Indominus Rex.
